A: I am extremely impressed by your skill in bootstrapping of these crackme's with some basic stuff on youtube. I really appreciate this, and I'll be sure to let my team know that you've cracked these cracks as I use them as a reference to help in designing our own exploits. (Brings me to a question, can I send you a badge?) If you do want to get paid for it, I can offer a paypal address to receive payment, but I would like to do it privately via bitcoins. I can provide more information if you like. If you can tell me what the license is for these crackmes you did, I'd like to acquire it, if you don't mind. (I believe cracking is against the law in some countries like the USA, but I'm not

BANGKOK — The victims of a Feb. 2 van attack in Bangkok had been hoping to seek asylum in Australia. The driver, who had no connection to them, had reportedly asked people on the street to help them, and it is thought that he meant to take them to Australia. “The two of them – they told me that they wanted to go to Australia, but I think there were other reasons. It was a little too sudden to know why,” said Mr. Sarothit, 39, a salesman who sold them a cheap van. He said that they were from the northern city of Chiang Rai. When he got the chance to give a witness statement to police on Feb. 4, he said, he was asked whether they were his friends. He said no and explained that he didn’t know them. “They said they were refugees, and I thought, ‘why refugees?’ I’m Thai. I didn’t know what refugees were,” Mr. Sarothit said. “I don’t really care, but they were two nice people. If they had asked me for money, I wouldn’t have given them. But they never asked.”
