How to get a free license key 1. download and install the app 2. Click on the "REALMEDIA CODE GENERATOR" button 3. copy the code and paste it on the receiptQ: How to implement a function filter in Rxjs and/or in angular without using a reset button Here is the scenario I would like to achieve. Imagine a table with a lot of rows. Each row has a button to delete the row. This button is enabled when at least one element has a different state than the selected one (same state for all the elements means it is not a real deletion). When a user clicks on the button of the row he wants to delete, all the other rows are disabled. When a user clicks on a row to delete, it does nothing else. My first approach was to use a simple filter const observable = Rx.Observable.from(myarray).filter(function (entry) { return entry.state!= selectedState; }) this approach works but when I use it, the selected item becomes unselected. Let's say my array is [{state: 'A', id: 1}, {state: 'A', id:

Electron spin resonance detection of nitroxide radicals and EPR oximetry of oxygen consumption by intact erythrocytes. We have detected free radicals in acetylated erythrocytes of living mammalian organisms by measuring the effects of electron spin resonance (ESR) on their oxygen consumption. Oxygen consumption by acetylated erythrocytes was found to be increased by ESR. Dose-response curves of ESR-induced changes in oxygen consumption were produced, which differed depending on the amount of acetylation and conditions of ESR spectrum. The nitroxide radicals of tetramethylpiperidine-1-yloxy (TMP-1-O) and 1,6-bis(octanoyloxymethyl)hexahydro-2,5-pyrrrolidinedione (S-DOCH2) enhanced oxygen consumption by intact erythrocytes at constant oxygen pressure. The oxygen consumption enhancement by the nitroxide radicals was concentration dependent and the maximum inhibition was dependent 6a5afdb4c
