The application has a built-in HTML template. You can open any HTML file, and it will create an automatic report in your favourite spreadsheet. If you select 'Start Date', 'Finish Date', and other date fields under Categories, you will see the report with the details of the task. Let's see it, here is a sample report for a banking project: The application also provides an option to create a custom report. You can choose any date range (Start and Finish), which will show your time on a bar chart. To create a report, click on Report. Here you will see the available options: Project: If you are working on any project, you need to select the project to generate the report. Category: If you are working on any of the categories (development, testing, training, meeting, etc.), then select the category Assigned By: Select the assigner of this task As soon as you select category and assigner, the report is generated. Export report: This is the last option. This is a common option and you will see this as and when you start working on any project. In this screen, we will see the options to select the types of the reports we want to generate. The application will generate any of the reports that are present in Excel Template. For example, we can generate a pie chart: We can also download the reports and process them as we wish. For more information, see To be able to download the reports, you need to provide access to your browser's PDF. You can add the parameter to your browser's address bar to download the report as PDF. PIE CHART Reports: Each report is generated based on a group of categories, so there are times when you don't want to report time spent on some categories. Category: The pie chart shows cumulative time spent on each category. Project: The pie chart shows time spent on individual project. However, we can select any group of categories to report on and the pie chart will show time spent on this group of categories: Here is an example of a pie chart BAR CHART Reports: Each report is generated based on a group of categories, so there are times when you don't want to report time spent on some categories. Things I loved: This is a really great time tracker for those who want to track their activities in a quick and easy manner. The reason I love this application is because, it can manage multiple users, can display all your activities, can generate reports and export them to multiple formats. The application has a sleek look, and is well designed. The user interface is very easy to use. It can display the tasks that are assigned to you, and also the projects you are working upon. This makes it easier to plan your tasks. It also lets you explore your project and analysis of projects. Things I didn't like: it lacks any kind of a timer. If you want to check a particular task duration and can't remember the exact time, you will have to calculate it. The application is free, but the main functions are restricted to the users who have registered. In conclusion, if you are looking for a simple and easy time tracker that can help you keep track of your time, then you should download it for yourself. Trip Inbox is a lightweight inbox application that works

This is the application which is designed to help you in tracking all your time. This application is the most extensively utilized application. It provides you with various reports of time tracking. Click on the 'Reports' button to get yourself started. Before reporting on the reports, let me say that as you execute the report operation, it will generate the PDF and Excel reports. All other reports are generated on-the-fly while executing the reports. Reports - In simple terms, reports are similar to summaries of tasks. Let us say you have performed a task for a specific client for a duration of 3 months. This task might have taken you a month to get completed. In any report, you will get the total work in different categories. So in the above example, if you ran the report for Client A, you will get details of Client A, your tasks, and all the categories in which you performed work on this client. PIE CHART - Pie-chart generates chart (based on given categories) which shows the usage of each category. To get this chart, click on the pie-chart icon on the right-bottom of the screen. - The pie chart shows how much work you have done in a specific category, and the percentage of work that has been done in a particular category on that specific day. You can select the category and the task for the pie chart. If you have selected the wrong category or wrong task, you can see the pie chart here. BAR CHART - Bar-chart is a well-known and widely used chart type. It shows the average number of tasks which you perform in a day. This chart can be generated using the following steps. - First, select the category to which you want to refer. If you are not able to generate the bar-chart for that category, click on the link 'Help' here, for some more help. - The bar chart can be generated for the selected category. Date Chart - If you want to generate a date chart, click on the date-chart icon. Enter the date in the format as mentioned here. In the following example, we have selected May as the month and 19th as the date. - Select category for the month/date and the task. This will give you the month/date chart. - Here, you can see the total number of tasks you have performed in all the major categories and also the total number of tasks you
